Religious freedom increasingly at risk in India as new attacks are perpetrated against Christians.

By Nirmala Carvalho

Mumbai (AsiaNews) - India's Christian communities have suffered new attacks, casting doubts over the status of religious freedom in the country.

The Global Council of Indian Christians (GCIC) has reported two new cases to AsiaNews. The worst took place in Rajasthan last Friday, when police beat 20 Christians for distributing leaflets. The second occurred in Madhya Pradesh last Sunday and involved a Pentecostal community.

In late February, a group of 20 Christians from Hyderabad travelled to Jaipur to distribute leaflets in Mansarowar Colony.

When this was happening, someone called the police, who took the Christians into custody. Once in the police station, police officers lined up the Christians against a wall and whipped their hands and wrists.

The second incident occurred in the village of Kasba Jobat (Alirajpur, M P.). Rev Emmanuel Nobel, head of the local Pentecostal community, was celebrating the Sunday liturgy, when members of the Hindu Jagran Manch forced their way into the farmhouse where the meeting was taking place. The radical group stopped the prayer service, accusing those present of engaging in forced conversions.

"Threats, intimidation and attacks against Pentecostal Christians are frequent in Madhya Pradesh, a state ruled by BJP, this causes fear and insecurity among the state's minorities," the GCIC president said.

Someone asked C.S. Lewis, "Why do the righteous suffer?" "Why not?" he replied. "They're the only ones who can take It."
